Trouble in the middle

Is time running out for business schools that aren't quite elite?

Oct 15th 2011 | Timekeeper | Like 383 | Tweet

A cartoon illustration by Steve May depicting business schools in various states of distress. On the left, a school is being held up by a single pillar. In the center, a school is being crushed by a large, heavy block. On the right, a school is being held up by a single pillar. The schools are anthropomorphized with faces and limbs, and the scene is set against a backdrop of rain and a dark, stormy sky.

Guidelines for Drafting the Visit Schedule

1. Applicant Institutions will be contacted well in advance of the Peer Review Visit with the request to submit a draft visit schedule. They should do so in a timely fashion. Draft schedules need to be received by the EPAS Office no later than eight (8) weeks prior to the Peer Review Visit. The EPAS Office will send the agreed schedule to the Peer Review Team no later than two (2) weeks prior to the visit.
2. The draft schedule must be based on the relevant template provided in the following pages, depending whether one or two programmes (or programme sets) are being assessed. Deviations should be explicitly justified when submitting the draft schedule and will only be accepted in very exceptional circumstances. The Institution may not erase any text provided with the template and shall therefore only amend the document in the appropriate places.
3. The Institution shall not contact the Peer Review Team or its Chair in advance of the visit to change the schedule.
4. The draft schedule must contain the names of all session participants as well as their titles/roles, so that the EPAS Office can evaluate the appropriateness of their inclusion.
5. Peer Review schedules shall be designed so that Peer Review Teams can interact with as many individuals as possible. Multiple appearances in several sessions must therefore be avoided, unless these individuals have multiple functional roles. If several programmes (or programme sets) will be reviewed, participants of the faculty sessions shall not overlap as well.

Admissible exceptions are e.g.:

- a. There are no restrictions on who can participate in the feedback session.
- b. Directors of the applicant programme (or programme set) will typically participate in the opening session as well as the session with the programme management team. While it is normally expected that quality assurance and programme management responsibilities be functionally separated, small institutions may have assigned quality assurance responsibilities to the programme director as well. In this case, the programme director can make an exceptional third appearance in the quality assurance session.

6. Audio or video recording of the interviews and feedback session is strictly forbidden.
